

MoveMatch adds live workout rooms and local event discovery

The live social update also adds Circle management roles for ongoing activity groups

ATLANTA - MoveMatch, the iPhone app created by Atlanta founder and software engineer Chris Terrell Jones, has added live workout rooms, Explore events and Circle management roles. The social update is available now and gives people more ways to participate in activities together and organize ongoing groups.

Jones, a Black founder with seven years of experience in technology, designed and built MoveMatch himself over two years while working full time. After competing in bodybuilding and powerlifting, he experienced burnout from routines that were difficult to sustain. His father's heart attack in 2025 prompted him to look more closely at physical activity guidance and reconsider how movement could fit into everyday life.

"I wanted fitness to be fun like when you were a child," Jones said.

Live workout rooms show participants who is ready, active or finished during a shared session. Explore lets people discover public events nearby and request to join, with the host approving requests. Circle management roles give owners, admins, managers and members different responsibilities within ongoing groups, including run groups and friend groups.

The update builds on MoveMatch's tools for creating movement sessions, inviting friends and viewing weekly activity progress. Users can build sessions around walking, dancing, strength training or everyday movement and complete them in the app's player. Recorded activity and user inputs contribute to Aerobic, Strength, Flexibility and Movement goals. The app tracks activity; it does not measure individual health outcomes.

People find Circles through invitations or through their events in Explore. Local event availability depends on participating hosts. Users can create events and invite friends when there is nothing nearby.

MoveMatch launched publicly in June 2026 and requires iOS 26 or later on iPhone. The app is free to download, with optional Pro subscriptions priced at $2.99 per week, $9.99 per month or $99.99 per year in USD.

About MoveMatch

MoveMatch is an iPhone movement app published by Funkibase LLC and founded by Chris Terrell Jones in Atlanta. It combines customizable sessions, weekly activity goals and tools for moving with friends and organizing groups.

Website: movematch.app | Download on the App Store

Press materials: movematch.app/press

Media contact: Chris Terrell Jones | contact@movematch.app